NETWORKS

Community Research and Learning Network (CORAL): http://www.coralnetwork.org

The Community Research and Learning (CoRAL) Network is a consortium of community-based organizations and higher education institutions in the Washington DC metro area engaged in community-based learning and research to promote positive social change and advance their social justice missions in the national capital region.

Educational Leadership Network http://thetimparker.com/

The Educational Leadership Network is dedicated to providing leaders current information and research on topics in educational leadership with a focus on Standards-Based Learning and Data-Driven Decision-Making. It is a resource for aspiring educational leaders at the school level: principals, assistant principals, and school leadership team members interested in current information, resources, best practices, and research on topics such as data-driven decision-making, educational leadership, standards-based learning, and web applications for educators.

Education for Liberation Network http://www.edliberation.org/

The Education for Liberation Network is a national coalition of teachers, community activists, researchers, youth and parents who believe a good education should teach people—particularly low-income youth and youth of color—how to understand and challenge the injustices their communities face. This organization promotes the teaching of social justice related issues in the classroom and provides a variety of research which encourages this progressive viewpoint. Includes an online “laboratory” for finding, discussing and developing social justice teaching materials, a social networking site, a research database and lesson plans.

Educator’s Network for Social Justice http://www.ensj.org/Main/HomePage

The Educators’ Network for Social Justice (ENSJ) is a network of practicing educators from Milwaukee, Wisconsin area schools including pre-service teachers, classroom teachers, and post-secondary educators. We are committed to promoting pro-justice curricula and policies so that all students in the Milwaukee area are better served.

International Justice Network http://www.ijnetwork.org/

The International Justice Network (IJN) leads human rights initiatives around the world by providing direct legal assistance and expertise to victims of human rights abuses and by creating a global network of legal professionals, non-governmental organizations and community-based human rights advocates in order to protect and promote human rights and the rule of law.

Leadership Network for International Education – American Council on Education
http://www.acenet.edu/Content/NavigationMenu/ProgramsServices/cii/current/forums/Leadership_Network.htm
The Leadership Network is an informal group that includes current and past members of the ACE Commission on International Initiatives and other presidents and chief academic officers who have indicated an interest in international education activities. Membership is open on request to any ACE member president or chief academic officer. The Leadership Network meets once a year.

Social Justice Network – Brown University
http://brownsjn.wordpress.com/
Social Justice Network helps social justice-minded organizations and individuals communicate and collaborate, promote upcoming events/actions, share organizing skills/techniques, and build a stronger social justice community.

Social Justice Network – Yale University
http://www.dwighthall.org/7027/Welcome_to_the_Social_Justice_Network
The Social Justice Network (SJN) of Dwight Hall at Yale is a coalition of organizations and individuals working for social justice and social change at Yale, in New Haven, and beyond. SJN is dedicated to building a community among those who identify themselves as working for social justice, while helping activists develop skills necessary to achieve this change. SJN is a resource center, providing the space for dialogue and cooperation, creating and maintaining links to other organizations. SJN works to keep activism alive and well at Yale, serving as an informal clearinghouse of activist groups, preserving and passing on the tools and knowledge of effective organizing from one graduating class to the next.

Teacher Leaders Network
http://teacherleaders.org/
The Teacher Leaders Network (TLN) is a national initiative of the Center for Teaching Quality. TLN is a network of active communities populated by highly accomplished teacher leaders from across the nation who are dedicated to student success and the transformation of teaching into a true profession.

The Global Justice Network
http://www.theglobaljusticenetwork.org/
The Global Justice Network is driven by a moral concern about the serious and real problems that lie behind global injustice. We believe global injustice in its various forms - such as, avoidable human suffering, war, oppression, exploitation and poverty - is the most pressing moral and political problem the world faces today. As academics, we want to ask: What are people’s moral obligations to each other within and across borders? Does the international order and its institutions affect inequalities across the globe? How can we best contribute to remedying human deprivation and oppression?

The Leadership Network
http://www.leadership-in-education.eu/
To set up a European network for the qualification of head teachers in schools and similar institutions, and at the same time guarantee a clear and present demand and frequent use of such a network – that is an exceptional challenge for all people involved. And yet – the project The Making of: Leadership in Education – A European Qualification Network for Effective School Leadership gives new impulses to not only our own education system, but also to those of all Europe.

The Learning Network – New York Times
The Learning Network is a New York Times effort in helping teachers with resources and lesson plan on various issues such as human rights, social justice, global concerns to name a few.

The Sadaqa Social Justice Network – University of Michigan
http://sadaqainternational.org/
The Sadaqa Social Justice Network aims to explore new and innovative strategies in grass-roots organizing, media, business, law, and politics to address the diverse social justice issues relevant to our network and our focus cause, combating modern slavery. To this end, we are dedicated to develop the leadership potential of all of our members, and strengthening the ties between diverse organizations on campus. Sadaqa seeks to build sustainable and long-term relationships with its partners, and actively assist in nurturing each partner’s goals via its own resources, while also encouraging dedication to the cause of networking for social justice. Current partners include SAPAC, the Muslim Students’ Association, the Michigan Journal of International Affairs, ONE, Shalom Alaykum, Interfaith Action, Project Shikkha, Inter-Humanitarian Council, Progressive Alliance, many more.