Philosophical Psychology – Implications for the Academy, the Clinic, and the Commons

A Conference for Alumni from the Clinical Psychology Programs at Duquesne University

April 10-13, 2014

We are inviting proposal and registration submissions for our alumni conference, scheduled for April 10-13, 2014. ALL graduates from both our Masters and Doctoral programs are welcome to participate in the conference, and we are encouraging a range of presentations - for example, clinical, theoretical, professional, or research based presentations. Additionally, a variety of presentation forums are available, from paper and panel presentations, to workshops and conversation hours. Please submit presentation proposals by January 31, 2014.

You may complete this form electronically, and forward to psychology@duq.edu, or print it out, complete, and forward via snail mail to:

Workshop- (3 hours)- Workshops are designed to provide extended time for more in-depth inquiry into a specific theme. This would likely include some didactic presentation and shared discussion, but could also involve experiential, interactive, or otherwise participatory activities. Workshops might explore, for example, a specific approach, innovation, or challenge regarding clinical work or qualitative research. Proposals focusing on philosophy, theory, method, and/or practice are all welcome.

Conversation Hour- (60 minutes)- Conversation hours are designed to provide an opportunity for informal discussion regarding themes of common interest. Themes could range, for example, from “qualitative research in today’s world” to “the DSM-V and philosophical psychology” to “psychology and social/ecological justice” to “what my study at Duquesne has meant to me.” Proposing a conversation hour theme does not require you to prepare any formal presentation, only to lead a collaborative conversation about an interest you share with other participants.
