The sixth Annual Rita M. McGinley Symposium

Social Justice for Vulnerable Populations:
The Face of the Person who has Experienced Violence

The term violence is derived from two Latin words that mean to “carry force.” By the mid-thirteenth century, violence was understood as physical force used to inflict injury and damage. Today, educators, social scientists, health professionals, ethicists and experts in crime and mental health define, categorize, analyze, report experiences of violence, and study perpetrators and those most at risk. Yet, in the face of heightened awareness and solid evidence about the short and long term effects on persons who inflict, witness, or experience violence, violence continues to increase worldwide.

Interpersonal violence often occurs between people who live in close proximity with each other. Violent attacks on children or adolescents by parents or family friends, abuse by persons who are helpers, teachers, health care workers, priests, and policemen erode trust, threatening normal development and limiting the capacity to form meaningful relationships. People who have been abused, especially if the violence occurs early in life, often suffer from depression, PTSD, and a myriad of physical illnesses.

Violence affects everyone. Ordinary people are becoming desensitized to violent acts as they acknowledge their vulnerability and avoid persons who live in neighborhoods that are zones of violence and chaos. Violence is not only a public health epidemic; it is an experience that renders a person vulnerable.

The sixth annual Rita M. McGinley Symposium, The Face of the Person who has Experienced Violence, challenges commonly held perceptions of violence and invites participants to be part of the solution, entering into dialogue and working together to restore human dignity, heal violent communities and reach out with love to persons who have experienced violence.
The Rita M. McGinley Symposium

The annual Rita M. McGinley Symposium, sponsored by the Duquesne University School of Nursing, provides a national forum where scholars, researchers, policy makers and health care professionals can share ideas for alleviating disparities in health, wellness and access to health care services. The School of Nursing hosts this national forum on health care issues, using the tradition of Catholic social thought as a unifying principle.

Duquesne University is an ideal place for a symposium on social justice and health care. Duquesne was founded in 1878 by the Congregation of the Holy Spirit, the Spiritans, a Catholic missionary order that assists needy and marginalized persons throughout the world. The McGinley Symposium is made possible through a generous endowment from the Rita M. McGinley Foundation. For more information about this and previous McGinley symposia, visit www.duq.edu/social-justice.

Rita M. McGinley, Educator and Philanthropist

A teacher and guidance counselor in Braddock, Pennsylvania, her hometown, Rita McGinley helped when powerful people ignored the region’s shuttered mills and emerging social problems. She provided leadership, inspiration and much-needed funding for numerous charitable organizations, and her influence has been profound and long lasting. The endowment of the Rita M. McGinley Symposium on Social Justice for Vulnerable People at the Duquesne School of Nursing is a living testament to her desire to encourage nurses, teachers, social workers, physicians and advocates in their work with underserved and forgotten people.

The Jacques Laval Endowed Chair for Justice for Vulnerable Populations

Rosemary Donley, S.C., PhD, APRN-BC, FAAN

Addressing social injustice is a key aspect of Duquesne University’s heritage and character, and our commitment to helping those most in need is being advanced through the efforts of Sr. Rosemary Donley, holder of the Jacques Laval Endowed Chair in Justice for Vulnerable Populations.

In addition to teaching and conducting research related to health care access and quality for underserved persons and communities, Sr. Donley is the principal organizer of the McGinley Symposium.

The Laval Chair is endowed through a bequest from the estate of the late Thomas F. Bogovich, a 1953 Duquesne University School of Business graduate.

The Laval Chair is named for Jacques Laval, a 17th century missionary, physician and member of the Congregation of the Holy Spirit, the Catholic order that founded Duquesne University. He worked among freed slaves on the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius, where he was able to restore a sense of dignity to people who had been freed but not liberated.

This first endowed chair in the School of Nursing calls attention to the faculty’s identification with Duquesne’s mission and the social justice tradition of the Catholic Church.
JACQUELYN CAMPBELL, BSN, MSN, PhD
Professor and Anna D. Wolf Chair
National Program Director, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Nurse Faculty Scholars
Johns Hopkins School of Nursing

Dr. Campbell has 30 years of experience as a researcher, clinician and educator in the area of violence against women and health outcomes. Since starting her research career with an investigation of homicide of women that showed prior intimate partner violence (IPV) as the primary risk factor for femicide, Dr. Campbell has conducted 13 major studies as the primary investigator of physical and mental health consequences of intimate partner violence, sexual assault, reproductive coercion and abuse during pregnancy (including PTSD and HIV/AIDS). She has developed and tested culturally appropriate interventions in the health care system and the community that improve its response to victims of IPV and co-occurring health inequities among vulnerable populations. She is the first National Program Director for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) Nurse Faculty Scholar Awards which provides research funding, leadership training and mentorship for junior nurse researchers.

RICHARD GARLAND, MSW
Center for Health Equity
Department of Behavioral and Community Health Sciences
Graduate School of Public Health, University of Pittsburgh

Mr. Garland devotes most of his time to working with troubled youth, especially those involved in gangs and violence. He frequently works with police departments throughout the state of Pennsylvania and provides training to police departments and community-based organizations. Mr. Garland heads the Center’s Violence Prevention Project and as a part of these efforts, he oversees training, data collection and outreach efforts aimed at reducing crime and violence. Mr. Garland will soon begin the Hospital Based Intervention Project that will focus on gunshot wound victims in the four major trauma units in Pittsburgh. In an effort to stop recidivism and provide care management services, Mr. Garland will work to change the lifestyle of the gunshot wound victim. He completed his master’s degree in social work in 1996, specializing in community organization. He has received numerous awards for his service, including the Lucien E. Blackwell award from Philadelphia Mayor, Michael Nutter, for contributions to the greater community in 2009, and the Courage to Comeback Award from the St. Francis Foundation on Overcoming Economic Diversity in 1998.
EDWARD P. MULVEY, PhD

Professor of Psychiatry
Director of the Law and Psychiatry Program
Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic, University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

Edward Mulvey has been at the University of Pittsburgh since 1983. He has conducted numerous research studies on violence and mental illness, prediction of future violence and crime, juvenile offenders, service provision in the juvenile justice system, and criminal justice policy. His research has investigated how clinicians make judgments about the risk posed by adults with mental illness and juvenile offenders, and what treatments are appropriate in these types of cases. He has recently served as the principal investigator on a longitudinal study of serious adolescent offenders, the Pathways to Desistance study, and as a member of two National Academy of Sciences panels assessing juvenile justice reform. Dr. Mulvey is currently a member of the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency and chair of the Science Advisory Board for the Office of Justice Programs of the U. S. Department of Justice. Dr. Mulvey received his BA in psychology from Yale University, his PhD in Community/Clinical Psychology from the University of Virginia, and post-doctoral training in quantitative methods in criminal justice at Carnegie-Mellon University.

JOHN SAWICKI, C.S.Sp., PhD

Assistant Professor
McAnulty College of Liberal Arts
Political Science, Duquesne University

John Sawicki, C.S.Sp. is an assistant professor in Political Science in Duquesne University, and the director of the Center for International Relations. He has been adjunct professor in the Program on Terrorism and Security Studies at the George C. Marshall Center for European Security in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. He holds his PhD from the Fletcher School of Law & Diplomacy. Sawicki teaches national security courses in Political Science and International Relations at Duquesne University, and lectures in counter-terror finance and religious violence topics at the Marshall Center, as well as other US embassy and military command venues in the world.
Bethlehem Haven

2015 Eileen Zungolo Spirit of Service Award

Bethlehem Haven

905 Watson St. | Pittsburgh, PA 15219 | 412.391.1348 | bethlehemhaven.org

Bethlehem Haven is a non-profit organization providing a number of services including emergency shelter; transitional housing; permanent supportive housing; meals; medical, dental, obstetrics and mental health services to women in the Pittsburgh area. The Haven also provides some medical and mental health services to non-residents, including men.

Since its modest beginning in the basement of Smithfield United Church to its current three uptown locations, Bethlehem Haven has provided shelter to thousands of homeless women in the community for more than 10,000 consecutive nights.

In recognition of their concern and work to support vulnerable people, we bestow upon Bethlehem Haven the 2015 Eileen Zungolo Spirit of Service Award.

Leadership Defined...
The Duquesne University School of Nursing

For 78 years, the Duquesne University School of Nursing has been preparing students in the art and science of nursing. True to its Catholic heritage and mission of service, the Duquesne University School of Nursing stresses ethical, holistic, culturally competent and population-based care.

Leadership Defined...Academic Excellence

The School of Nursing has a strong tradition of pioneering new approaches and continues to be on the cutting edge of innovation and experimentation. It was the first school of nursing in Pennsylvania to offer a baccalaureate degree (BSN) and later, the first in the nation to offer a doctorate (PhD) in nursing completely online. In 2015, the School of Nursing was designated a third time as a National League for Nursing Center of Excellence in Nursing Education for 2015-2020 and was recognized by U.S. News & World Report with the following rankings:

- #75 graduate programs (an increase of 52 places from #127 in 2013)
- #9 graduate online nursing programs
- #9 graduate online nursing programs for veterans

Leadership Defined...Service and Research

This annual symposium is one expression of the Duquesne University School of Nursing’s commitment to advocate and care for vulnerable people by working to create a more just society. The School of Nursing also exemplifies the Duquesne University tradition of combining academic achievement with community service through our two nursing centers.

- Community-Based Health & Wellness Center for Older Adults for underserved communities, where nurses and other health-care providers promote health and wellness and monitor chronic medical conditions. Nurse-led wellness centers in city neighborhoods offer students an invaluable learning experience as well as an opportunity for community service.

- Center for Research for Underserved and Vulnerable Populations is a forum for networking, exchanging information and fostering innovation. The Center is committed to creating partnerships between the University and communities—regionally, nationally and globally—in order to achieve excellence in nursing science.

The School of Nursing is accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education and approved by the Pennsylvania State Board of Nursing.

Building a healthy future

UPMC Health Plan and Community Care Behavioral Health are proud to support the 6th Annual Rita M. McGinley Symposium, Exploring Social Justice for Vulnerable Populations: The Face of the Person who has Experienced Violence.
We thank and congratulate the organizers and supporters of the

THE RITA M. MCGINLEY SYMPOSIUM

For six years they have challenged educators and health care professionals, inspiring them to improve health care services for the elderly, for immigrants, for veterans, for children and for all those who have experienced violence.

Their efforts in coming years will continue to make the goal of delivering the best care for the most vulnerable achievable.

We celebrate their accomplishments on behalf of the underserved, and we are honored to offer our support.

SUSAN AND SCOTT LAMMIE
VIOLENCE affects us all.

Catholic Charities provides anger management counseling to help people manage their emotions and behavior in an age-appropriate way.

- Adult and adolescent male and female groups, and individual counseling.
- Non-judgmental, professional atmosphere.
- Counseling available at our outreach offices in Beaver, Greene and Washington counties.
