#DURESPECT

November:

Paper Chain

As part of the campaign, the Departments of Health Service and Freshmen Development and Special Student Services conducted the "Paper Chain" in November. Students filled out slips of paper with their thoughts on the word RESPECT.

Here are some of the comments:

Respect Means…

- Treating others how you would like to be treated
- Considering others' feelings before acting
- Being nice and helpful to people around you
- Not judging people for being different than you
- Being nice to your roommate
- Accepting others for who they are
- Giving a smile to someone who is down
- Honoring yourself
- Finding the good in all people
- Treating others how Christ would treat you
- Humility in all things
- to identify with the divinity in each other

- Being aware of the people around you and being curious
- Striving to understand others rather than automatic prejudice
- Realizing that we, no matter race, ability, gender/sexual orientation, religion, are all humans
- An awareness of the dignity appropriate to the other through the other's participation in the divine life and providence
- Being open to the idea that other people might be right
- Esteem and recognition for other's worth
- To have complete trust in a person
- Serving for our country and risking your life for us
- Giving thanks and appreciation to those who are deserving
- Loving yourself and spreading that love to others
- Love, trust, honesty, compassion
- Loving unconditionally
