GLBH 150 - INTRO TO AFRICAN STUDIES

This course will present inter/multi-disciplinary perspectives on sub-Saharan Africa paying attention to the many factors -society, politics, economics, culture, literature, religion, ecology, among others- that have shaped the region and impact its role in our world today.

GLBH 185 - INTRO TO GLOBAL HEALTH

This course provides an introductory survey of global health and topics relevant to the understanding of global health. In addition to learning what global health is, students will be exposed to relevant organizations in global health, where global health data comes from, and the influences of poverty, nutrition, conflict, culture, ethics and other areas upon global health. This course is required within the undergraduate global health minor and satisfies 3 required credit hours for completion of the minor.
GLBH 324 - CULTURAL APPLICATIONS IN CLINICAL PRACTICE

This course introduces models of transcultural health care. Issues to the health care professional’s role in the delivery of culturally competent based health care are explored. Emphasis is placed on the assessment and analysis of culturally congruent care as related to clinical practice issues in the United States and Globally and more specifically in the context of sub-Saharan Africa. Interplay between models of transcultural care and other models of clinical application of culturally appropriate interventions are examined.
